THE TALBOT FAMILY

Amoung the ancient and most historical familes is found that of Talbot which since early times has participated in making world history in France, England, Ireland and Canada.

The lineage of the Talbot family can be traced back to the yeer 1066 when Le Sire Jean William Talbot dit Gervais left his home perish in Saint Gervais, Rouen. Normendy to fight as an officer in the Army of William the Conqueror of England at the famous battle of Hastings when Sire William defeated King Harold the Second and became King of England.

(* Note The name William is written Guillaume in French and is so written in meny histories but I will write the name in English as William in my story except where Guillaume may be a part of a recorded record in French Archives.

There were three Talbot brothers that accompanied William the Conqueror to England. They were Guillaume (called William in English) Richard and Geoffroi (called Godfrey in English.

My ancestor was William who returned to Rouen in Normendy and from one of his son's decendents came my Canadian ancestor Jean Jacques Talbot dit Gervais

Richard and Godfrey remained in England and sired the English and Irish branchs of the Talbot Family.

William the Conqueror erected on the battlefield of Hastings a monastery as a memorial of his victory and called it Battle Abby.
In the Monastery was preserved for Centuries the names of several hundred of his principal followers.
Le Sire Guillaume Talebot, (Ancient spelling of Talbot) is amoung the names inscribed as one of the Normen Knights who was an officer in "William the Conqueror's Army.

William Talbot's name also appears in the foundation Charter in 1057 by Robert Comte D'Eu of Abby of Treport near Eu in Normandy. The name is recorded Guillaume Talebot

William Talbot had two sons who moved from Normandy to England Namely Richard born about 1050 and Goeffrey who held land in Essex. Other sons remained in Normandy

There are many noted English and Irish Talbots so I will tell you some things about them for all Talbots had a common ancestrial background in Normandy France and history records that the culture and progress of Normandy - England - Ireland and Canada was largely due to the way of life introduced into the countries by my Norman ancestors.

THE ENGLISH TALBOTS

Some of the Talbots who accompanied Le Sire William Talbot dit Gervais to England and were members of his family did not return to Normandy but stayed in England, droped the Sirname dit Gervais, revised the spelling from Talebot to Talbot and merried English wives.

The decendents of these English Talbots became very English indeed, so much so that some of them, from 1420 to 1453 fought against their french relations in France in many battles.

One of the English decendents of the Normen Talbots was Richard Talbot who in the early 12th century rose to Baronial rank. His Grandson in the late 12th century received from King Henry the Second a grant of Lordship of Eccleswall and Linton in Herfordshire. In the early 14th Century Gilbert Talbot of this same line was prominent in the military enterprises of King Edward 3rd. He served in every parliment and war in that reign.

On of the great generals of the 15th Century was Sir John Talbot who helped conquer Ireland under King Henry the fifth.

This Sir John Talbot accompanied King Henry the Sixth in his triumphal march to paris.

*See Dickens Childs History of England for a detailed story about Sir John Talbot.

Later Sir John Talbot entered France in command of all English forces and was highly successful until 1429 when Joan of Arc gave him battle and captured him. Still later released upon payment of a tremendous ransom, he returned to England, raised a new Army and returned to reconquer France.

For his exploits he was named Earl of Shrewsbury.

In 1453 at the age of 80 he was killed in the battle of Chastillon. He was found on the battlefield by his herald who had borne his Coat of Arms for more than fourty years.

Sir John Talbot created such a legend in England and was so feared by the french that Shakespeare alludes to him some 80 year later in his play "Henry VI" act 2, scene 3; in which he says "Is this the Talbot so feared abroad, that with his name the mothers still their babies?

THE ENGLISH TALBOT LINE IS AS FOLLOWS.—

11th Century Sir Richard Talbot 1st, in the reign of William the first.

12th Century Sir Richard Talbot 2nd. Earl of Shrewsbury, Reign of King Henry 2nd.

14th Century, Sir Gilbert Talbot in Reign of King Edward the Third.

15th Century. Sir John Talbot knighted in England and held a Vice Royalty in the Reigns of both Henry the fifth and Henry the sixth.

16 Century, John Talbot 2d Kings Courier in the reign of Henry the Eighth.

THE MONTREAL COURRIER reports that on September 23, 1955 Miss Mathilde Talbot of Lacock Abbey England wisited Montreal Canada and is quoted to have said that she is a direct decendent of the above mentioned Sir John Talbot 2d.

It was in Lacock Abbey founded in 1232 that THE MAGNA CHARTA, dating back to 1225 was hid in World War I. by members of the Talbot family.
In this Magna Charta lies the foundation of the British Laws.

The Lacock Abbey was founded as a religious convent for girls. It was built by the High Sheriff's wife in his memory.

During the reign of king Henry VIII when all religious orders were closed the Abby was bought by the king's courier John Talbot 2d.

The MagnaCharta had been in the Abbey for a great meny years. Miss Talbot says she does not know just when the MagnaCharta was found in the Abbey but she believes it was taken into the Abbey when the High Sheriff's wife was made Abbess Superior.

Miss Mathilde Talbot hid the MagnaCharta during World War One in a Zinc Case wrapped in some old flannel and buried it along with some other books

Miss Mathilda Talbot was decorated by the British Government with the Cross of the British Empire.

She presented The Megna Charte to the British people. It was insured for £50,000 and loaned to the Congressional Library in Washington D.C. U.S.A for two years.

Many of the Early American Talbots are the decendents of a Marthy Talbot who came to America from England and settled in Maryland in 1722.

Marthy Talbot was son of Sir Thomas Talbot the third son of Sir John Talbot 10th Earl of Shrewsbury. In England in 1120 and for some time thereafter the name Talbot was sometime written Talebot.

THE IRISH TALBOTS

The Talbot family first got a foothold in Ireland in the Eleventh Century in the reign of King William the First Conqueror of England in 1066.

The Irish branch of the Talbot family was well established in the reign of King Henry V in the 15th century when Sir John Talbot was given the Vice Royalty in Ireland.

There were several Talbots in his Army who married Irish girls so the Irish Talbots are a mixture of Norman, English and Irish blood.

I will give you now the line of decent of the most prominent Talbots who sired the later Irish Talbots.

Here Are Seven Noted Talbots who were prominent in Irish History

1 - Sir Richard Talbot 1st 11th Century in the reign of King William the first

2 - Sir Richard Talbot 2nd Earl of Shrewsbury in the 12th Century reign of King Henry 2nd.

He was invested with Ancient Baronial Rank and established the famous Castle of Malahide, in Dublin County Ireland where Talbots still live to the present day.

3 - Sir Gilbert Talbot 14th Century reign of King Edward 3rd.

4 Sir John Talbot 15th Century reigns of King Henry 5th and King Henry 6th.

Sir John Talbot held Vice Royalty in Ireland.

5 Sir Richard Talbot 3rd Earl of Tryconnell in 17th Century reign of King James 2d.

This Sir Richard is given a bad reputation as a very bigoted and cruel Catholic despot according to Dicken's Childs History of England.

6 Sir Richard Talbot 4th in 18th Century reign of King George 3rd.

7 Honorable Colonel Thomas Talbot son of Sir Richard 4th of Malahide Dublin County Ireland and Baroness Margaret Talbot.

Honorable Colonel Thomas Talbot was born July 17, 1771 in Ireland and died in the Talbot settlement on the Canadian side of Lake Erie Feb. 6, 1859.
He was a lieutenant in the English Army at the Age of Twelve.
In 1803 he abandoned his military career to move to America where he lived a tempestuous life in the unsettled wilderness of Canada. (London Ontario now)
He was known as the Baron of Lake Erie.
If you want to know more about him read Fred C. Hamil's book "Lake Erie Baron". published by MacMillion Press.
Many Irish including some Talbots came to Canada between 1808 and 1819.
They settled in Isle-de-Orleans, Montmorancy, Quebec, sherbrooke and North of Lake Erie.
These Irish Talbots were known to their French Cousins as "The De Milliers de Malheureux, Enfants de L'Eralande" Later some Irish Talbots settled in Montreal and many moved to the United States and settled in many New England cities and towns.
These Irish Talbots call themselves Malahide Irish if they came from the Baronial District of the County of Dublin Ireland.
Read Student's History of Ireland by Stephen Gwynn and the Life of Hugh Talbot who the Irish people are trying to have made a Saint.

THE FRENCH CANADIAN TALBOTS.

I Louis Benjamin Talbot of waltham Mass. belong to the Canadian branch of the French Norman Talbot family.

The first french Norman Canadian Talbots of whom I have an exact record was a direct decendant of the Sire William Talbot dit Gervais who I told about in the early part of this story.

His name was Jean Jacques Talbot dit Gervais. He was born in Saint Gervais parish in the Village of Rouen Normandy in 1676 the son of Nicholas Talbot dit Gervais and Marie Dushesne of this same parish.

Jacques, as he was called, left Rouen at the age of twenty in the year 1697 and moved to Saint Themas de Montmagny provence of Quebec, Canada.

He resigned his military duties as an officer in the French Army and married Charlotte Sommereux aged 20 who was baptised in Point aux Trembles on the 27th of March 1678, the daughter of Noel Sommereux and Jeanne Goguet, his wife.

The marriage contract was passed before Notary Jean Baptist fleuricour in Riviere des prairies, Montreal, provence of Quebec.

Charlotte bore Jacques six children. She died in 1708 [illegible] in Saint Thomas de Montmagny

Jean Jacques Talbot dit Gervais married his second wife, Catherine Lamarre April 19, 1710 in Saint Thomas and by her he had five children.

Jean Jacques Talbot dit Gervais died and was buried in Montreal March 27, 1756. His body was exhumed in November 1756 and placed on the side of the Gospel in the New Church in Saint Thomas which replaced the Old Chapel of Roisseau-a-la-Caille.
